It's due at 11:59 p.m.

And up until the last minute, there's typing and double checking and calculating. By midnight it's over. But the night surely isn't.

At midnight there's late night snacks, more studying to do or Dickson to visit.

And all of those things are so much better than a warm bed after a long day.

Sleeping is for the dead, and the spirit of the razorbacks is not something that can pass.

At midnight meet me at Old Main.

The stars will be bright, and the wind will rattle the autumn leaves, making a new song just for us.

It's midnight at Old Main.

We can hear Dickson from here.

I'll race you to Shots where the bouncer will draw x's on our 20-year-old hands.

At midnight I walk past Old Main heading to my car to finally drive home.

I've been on campus since 8 a.m., and the day is almost over.

Old Main looks older at midnight as it watches over its lawn.

Does it ever get tired of never being alone?

At midnight meet me at Old Main.

I can swipe us into Bell, and we can head down to the computer lab where it's quiet enough for us to finish this project.

It's midnight at Old Main, and we realize it was due at 11:59 a.m. not p.m.

Who the hell does that to students?

It doesn't matter though, because we both know there will be more assignments but only a few more fall nights.

Cold enough for a jacket but warm enough to break a sweat running past Old Main to your dorm to formulate our next steps.

But Old Main's steps don't need formulating as they were laid for her sitting out on each side drawing us each in and capturing a million moments.

Since 1899, Tontitown Grape Festival has grown to the largest festival in Northwest Arkansas, according to the festival's official website. This annual festival entertains visitors with many attractions such as a carnival, an arts & craft fair, a used book sale and a Run for the Grapes. And this year, Emma Holt was crowned as the 123 Queen Concordia. This year, the festival was held for five days, from Aug. 2-6. The origin of the festival dates back to when Italian Catholic immigrants founded Tontitown and started church services along with Spaghetti Dinners. They landed in Tontitown after Father Pietro Bandini, who had been sent to the States to help these families, found an American selling stony farm-land for two or three dollars an acre. More Italian families settled in on the farm land, and they named their home Tontitown after Henri De Tonti, the first Italian and LaSalle's Chief Lieutenant, who had established the first white colony in Arkansas. Bandini led the community from that point on - first as pastor then as mayor - until he had a stroke at the end of 1916, but he was there to see the beginnings of what would become the Grape Festival.

In 1913, this event was held with the grape harvest in August, and a few years later, it was named The Grape Festival."

I go to the festival almost every year," Benjamin Tan, senior, said. The Spaghetti Dinner was my favorite part of the festival. The spaghetti is homemade from an old Italian family recipe. It's really good spaghetti." Tan said the festival is a fun way to end the summer.

It's a great experience," Tan said. You can just go and have some fun, eat some food."

My favorite part of rush was growing closer with my sisters and creating a bond with them," Delta Gamma member Amy Abokhair, sophomore said.

And with each year pledges only have more and more sisters to bond with. Greek Life grew tremendously over the last few years, but the 2022 sorority pledge classes continue to be larger than ever. Taking pledge classes of around 200 girls each, sororities recruited the largest new member classes in the nation.

Abokhair's pledge class from 2021 currently stands at 125 girls - meaning Delta Gamma's pledge classes has grown by 50% in the past two years.

I think the bigger pledge classes are better," Jordan Childs, sophomore, Zeta Tau Alpha member said. Because no matter where you go, you're going to have somebody in your sorority or in a class or in your dorm or apartment, and it creates more of a community."

Tin Roof, a Nashville-nightlife-inspired bar, opened on Dickson Street in August 2022 and has since become known for its food, drinks and live music.

The bar has two stories, three patios, a stage to feature live music and an electric ambiance. It hosts a variety of people, including some celebrities, even though it began as a place for musicians to minge when they aren't performing, according to their website. Since the opening of its location in Fayetteville, the bar has become quite a hit with older students, according to senior Megan Zaves.

The best night to go to Tin Roof is Wednesdays for karaoke," Zaves said, Definitely the best bar on Dickson and my favorite place to be with friends since there's a space for dancing, singing and just hanging out at all times."

DIRTY DANCING
Released in 1987, Dirty Dancing became a classic for Drive-In movie showings. The 112 Drive-In showed this film in the summer of 2020.

FERRIS BUELLER'S DAY OFF
This 1986 John Hughes's film, Ferris Bueller's Day Off is a Drive-In favorite. Ferris Bueller is a rule breaking high school student who goes on one crazy adventure.

JAWS
Steven Spielberg's 1975 film, Jaws, is shown at different Drive-In theaters every year. This thriller never fails to scare viewers during a late night drive-in showing.

Fayetteville's 112 Drive In closed its doors on Aug. 27 after 42 years. The property was sold to a developer to build homes.

Junior Dina Patel went two nights before it closed to watch Grease.

The movie played very smoothly and we were able to sing and dance along with the movie," Patel said. It made the experience more fun and interactive to not have to worry about being quiet."

Patel loved the vibe of the Drive In. She felt like it was a comforting place to watch movies.

It was nice to watch an older movie in a drive-in," Patel said. You can create a comfortable space to watch movies. My friends and I brought pillows and blankets and made such a cozy little spot outside the car to watch."

Patel wished the Drive In wouldn't close because it held so much history for the people of Fayetteville.

I saw an old couple leave that night in a convertible and it made me think that they were probably reliving old memories of them watching drive-in movies for the last time," Patel said. The drive-in makes the movie experience so much more fun."

IN THE CROWD

Lining the street, cars waited to park at the 112 Drive-In to attend the late night showing of Grease and Footloose on Aug. 27. Students left their cars for the lawn checking their phones before the movie started on the last night of operation.

The third annual SOAR NWA event, which included a variety of hot air balloon activities, created an opportunity for freshmen to experience Fayetteville and grow closer with new friends. Freshman Anna Kreamer went to see the hot air balloons with a few girls in her sorority and dorm. [The festival] was super helpful because it provided a fun environment where we could get to know each other," Kreamer said.

SOAR took place at Drake Field Airport and included several options like skydiving, helicopter rides and a car exhibit. Kreamer said she thinks the main aspect students wanted to see was the hot air balloons because several people posted about it on Instagram.

She and her friends loved watching everyone sit in their lawn chairs and listen to music around the glowing hot air balloons. It was really sweet because there was music playing and people sitting out in their lawn chairs listening to music," Kreamer said. It just felt like a very summery, happy atmosphere." Kreamer looked at several other schools like the University of Arkansas, but she said the city of Fayetteville and hearing about events like SOAR made her decision easier. There's such a strong community aspect and so many fun activities going on," Kreamer said.

WASHINGTON COUNTY FAIR SHOOTING

Shots were fired at the Washington County Fair on Aug. 27, 2022. A 16-year-old boy was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, according to a Fayetteville Police Department press release. Fayetteville police arrested a different 16-year-old in connection to the shooting the following Sunday. Freshman James Baird witnessed the confrontation and shooting at the fairgrounds. Baird said fairgoers, including teenagers, families and children, struggled to escape the frenzied fairgrounds.

According to the Fayetteville Police Department, there was a large altercation that is being investigated — police believe the confrontation between two men led to the shooting. While watching the altercation between the two men, Baird saw people crowding around the boys to film the fight. All of a sudden, the shots went off, and everyone took off running. I remember little kids trying to find their parents screaming, crying,” Baird said. It was literally mayhem. People were running and screaming,” Baird said he was still shaken up days after the shooting. There were several injuries reported that are believed to have been due to a stampede following the shooting, but authorities have not yet confirmed this.

In a press release, the Fayetteville Police Department said their initial investigation has led them to believe this was a targeted incident and not a random act of violence, but did not elaborate further. It wasn’t like the first time I’ve been in something like that, but it was the first time I’ve been right next to it seeing that happen,” Baird said. My initial instinct was to get everyone out.”

FORMAT MUSIC FESTIVAL

FORMAT Music Festival attracted students to Downtown Bentonville from September 23-25 to experience new music, art and technology. Bentonville is the home of Walmart, and the Walton family has done their best to invest in the quickly growing region, from creating Crystal Bridges, an American world-class art museum, to building mountain biking trails. A festival like FORMAT was the next step. The leading creative house of the festival is TRIADIC, overseen by Roya Sachs, Mafalda Millies, Elizabeth Edelman and their partner Charles Attal of C3 Presents. Their company has produced Lollapalooza and Austin City Limits, among other festivals — FORMAT was adopted by the Walton family after four years of building it. There were two main stages, “North of Oz” and “South of Oz,” which took turns with live performances and multiple setups happening simultaneously so festival-goers could take advantage of everything the festival had to offer. The visual artists who appeared at the festival included Doug Aitken, John Gerrard, Nick Cave, Pia Camil and DRIFT. The main field was filled with dynamic works by female artists. The festival included a variety of mesmerizing moments like late-night parties from Fatboy Slim in Toiletpaper’s eclectic barn-turned-music venue, Drag Me to The Disco, Pia Camil’s colorful interactive textile installation and Shoplifter’s furry totem pole forest that oscillated high in the sky. Almost all the musicians who performed, from Moses Sumney and Phoenix to the War on Drugs, made comments about being surprised to be in Arkansas. “We will never have all the same people in one crowd again, this energy won’t happen again, we won’t see each other again, especially not in Arkansas,” Sumney said onstage, before introducing one of his last songs. Or maybe we will!”

Music, giveaways and tables of information – the university hosted its second Hill-ish fair in the Union Square on Sept. 1. Hill-ish was first introduced last fall by the Office of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion as an RSO event intended for minority organizations to put themselves out there. Despite being referred to as a cultural fair, the event also opened tables to mental health resources, diversity-oriented fraternities and sororities and the graduate school. Students volunteered to represent their organizations and educate their peers. At the event, students could approach tables and request information about the attending RSOs such as STEM, Chinese Students and Scholars Association and fraternity Kappa Alpha Psi. Attendees could leave their personal contact information for organizational updates and their designated chats for GroupMe. It made me feel more comfortable on-campus, and it made me feel like I wasn't alone," table volunteer and junior Sherjeel Naeem said.

THE HOGS IN THE Stands

The Hogs take the field, but the Razorbacks take the stands. And game-day gear has several key identifiers. There are jerseys, Cardinal Red dresses and the infamous striped overalls. Popular accessories are cowboy hats, pins and clear bags, which to be fair are the only bags coming inside the stadium.

One of the game options during Cardinal Nights' Casino Night was playing classic slot machines. Sitting right next to the photobooth, the slot machines sat ready to use. Not only were there three different machines to choose from, but each one had different themes and graphics to cater to any individuals' interests. Other options during Casino Night was getting a caricature. Student as well as their families could see their personalities sketched out. Along with caricatures, there were also balloon animals and a photobooth.

BETTER TOGETHER

Copy by Riley Atkinson

Family weekend, which took place from Sept. 16 to Sept. 18, encourages students to bring their family to campus and take them to events.

Freshman Riley Borchardt and her mom had a fun weekend together — they were glad to reunite for the first time since college began. Since her family lives five hours away, the separation was difficult for them at first.

My favorite thing that I did for family weekend was get to spend time with my mom and going shopping and showing her around campus,” Borchardt said. I felt joyous to see my mom again.”

Borchardt and her mom also went to the Missouri State football game together. They have never been to a Razorback game, so it was a good experience

The football game was awesome,” Borchardt said.

It was definitely a lot of walking and a big crowd, but it didn’t take that long to get to our seats.”

Borchardt’s mom was excited to see her daughter again after not seeing her for weeks.

It’s reassuring for me as a parent to see that she is doing good and is having fun on her own adventures,” Borchardt’s mom said.

With her being five hours away from home there is always that worry.”

BANNED BOOKS

I asked for reading recommendations – two days later, my 10th grade English teacher dropped “The Bluest Eye” on my desk and she had already signed it out for me from her personal library.

I finished the novel within three days and have never viewed literature in the same way.

While this novel had been sitting on a bookshelf in my teacher’s classroom, it – along with other works written by its author Toni Morrison – had been collecting dust on banned books lists across the country.

Judith Krug, First Amendment and library activist, created Banned Books Week in the 80s for the sake of educating the public about book censorship in the United States. Their platform argues that novels like Morrison’s Pulitzer Prize-winning “Beloved,” which explores the violent interactions between slavery, mental health and family dynamics, are meant to be read by the public. A common theme in American schools and libraries is restriction of literature that is deemed too intense for the ordinary reader, with over 2000 individual books being banned between the summers of 2021 and 2022.

Book banning found footing during the civil rights movement. For a book to be legally banned, it must contain some sort of "obscene" content, which while subjective largely means that said media would breach national security or have a needlessly graphic plotline that does not have any serious societal contribution. Banned Books Week serves to represent intellectual property and preserve our history, experiences and culture. It also creates opportunities for young adults to gain knowledge about the world - historical and present. Within the last several years, the banning and criticism of books has increased. While the reasons for censorship are wide, as of late it often centers around community values rather than public interest. People do not want their children to be exposed to anything that may directly oppose the beliefs they are being brought up with and, to some extent, are pushing back against individualism by not allowing young kids to form their own opinions about the world. Kara Gould, Media Law Professor in the School of Journalism and Strategic media, said, "Banning a book is not going to keep those young adults from finding out about those things, especially now with the internet." Publications such as The Diary of a Young Girl by Anne Frank and To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee have been a staple in the English curriculum of American schools for decades but are also among some of the most banned books in the United States. The two books serve as a soft and age-appropriate introduction to social inequality and coming of age and do not include excessively graphic content.

The conversations brought about by these kinds of publications can be confusing, uncomfortable and painful, especially when it directly pertains to our personal history as a country when it comes to things like sexism and racism. But this is an ongoing struggle for our society.

"I do think that it will swing back the other way if people who have different opinions will interact with each other," Gould said. "That's something that we need to focus on - disagreeing in a civil way. That way more ideas can be heard."

THE GREAT MIGRATION

Design by Hannah Cunningham

Students traveled to Arlington, Texas on Sept. 24 for what they call the "Great Migration" to watch the match up of No. 10, Arkansas, versus No. 20, Texas A&M, in the Southwest Classic.

Fans were excited for the game at AT&T Stadium because the Razorbacks won last season. The Razorbacks started off strong in the first quarter, which had fans excited and on the edge of their seats.

During the first quarter I felt hopeful and excited," sophomore Gloria Miner said. To me, this is what Razorback Football was all about. The Southwest Classic is always a stressful game and I found that anxiety slip away during the first quarter. I was proud to be a Razorback."

Arkansas defensive end, Zach Williams, and linebacker, Drew Sanders, led the first quarter defensively. The two played a massive part in only allowing a 2.5-yard gain per play. Texas A&M remained scoreless in the first quarter. However, the game took a turn for the worst in the second quarter when Arkansas quarterback, KJ Jefferson, fumbled the ball at the 3-yard line while attempting to jump over the pile to score a touchdown. The fumble resulted in a 97-yard return touchdown for Texas A&M.

From that point, the Razorbacks offensive and defensive lines struggled. By the fourth, it was a close game with Arkansas trailing by two points. With barely any time left on the clock and the crowd all on their feet, Arkansas kicker, Cam Little, was expected to kick the game winning field goal.

Once the kick was up, the entire stadium went silent as they watched the kick hit the goalpost.

The Razorbacks took their first loss of the season 23-21.

Anytime the police or firestation is dispatched, the date, time of call, description of the instance and the location is logged on the city's website: fayetteville-ar.gov. The log is public information and can be accessed at anytime. Below are selected police logs from the week of Sunday, September 25th to Saturday, October 1st.

THE PASSING OF QUEEN ELIZABETH

The world was shocked by the death of Queen Elizabeth II on Sept. 8, 2022.

The Queen passed due to natural causes at 3:10 p.m. at Balmoral Castle in Scotland. When asked about her reaction to the news, Jordan Childs, a sophomore at the university, said, "I was shocked. When I first saw it online, I didn't know if it was true because it just seemed so unreal."

The news of her passing quickly spread online, eliciting a viral social media response and a variety of emotional responses across countries. Her funeral was held Sept. 19 at Westminster Abbey and was broadcasted worldwide. BBC News reported that 26.2 million viewers watched the service live on television, and another estimated million people visited the funeral site in person, only 2000 of which were invited to the service as guests.

The Queen, whose reign lasted over seventy years, has been succeeded by her son, King Charles III. The Ascension Council announced Charles as the new king on Sept. 10, two days after his mother passed. Although he has already ascended the throne, his official coronation will not take place until May 6, 2023. Alongside him, Duchess Camilla will take the same oath.

Since his mother's passing, many have asked King Charles III about his plans for the work he has dedicated his life to now that he has become king at age 74. He remarked that he trusted his work will go on in the trusted hands of others."

King Charles declared his dedication to Britain in his first speech as king in September of 2022, saying, "I ... solemnly pledge myself throughout the remaining time God grants me to uphold the constitutional principles at the heart of our nation, and wherever you may live in the United Kingdom or in the realms and territories across the world and whatever may be your background or beliefs, I shall endeavor to serve you with loyalty, respect, and love as I have throughout my life."

Bikes, Blues and BBQ, a non-profit motorcycle rally, brought approximately 250,000 people to Rogers, Arkansas for its four-day charity event from Oct. 5-8, raising awareness and funds to support the community.

Freshman Karlie Phillips has been an active attendee of the motorcycle event because she's grown up surrounded by it as an NWA local.

My parents loved motorcycles, they thought it was entertaining, and that's when we decided to go. We went with family friends and it was a blast," Phillips said.

Bikes, Blues and BBQ began in the year 2000, and the region of Northwest Arkansas has seen not only economic growth and awareness for local charities, but the rally also brought together a memorable community.

One of the big highlights from the times that I have gone was getting into the newspaper, the Arkansas Democratic Gazette," Phillips said.

After the Bikes, Blues and BBQ event was over, someone wrote an article about it and used my photo. I believe I was 16 at the time."

While Phillips understood why bikers were in town, many college students from other regions and states were confused to see Dickson St. on Oct. 5 when motorcycles filled the streets.

The non-locals should know that this organization brings in money to better our towns," Phillips said.

It's one of the biggest events of the year. It reaches many local charities, informs people and it's just a great event for friends and family to go to and spend time with each other."

YANCEY'S HOT DOG STAND

Yancey's hoodies are popular with its visitors.

LATEST TIKTOK TRENDS

TikTok, the rabbit-hole inducing social media application, is constantly moving through popular trends. A trend can easily come and go in the span of a week. Listed here are several of the latest TikTok trends.

It's corn! This TikTok trend is based on an audio of a young boy named Tariq that professed his love for the vegetable during a video interview. People have since edited the interview to create a song. To participate in the trend, put the audio on a video of someone or something that you are a fan of.

All of a sudden... I hear this agitating, grating voice". This audio, spoken by Abby Lee Miller, the reality-tv star, is used in videos where the subject is describing a common nuisance. Creator @ker107 used the audio to describe that annoying moment at the end of the business day when you get another email notification.

2

I'm your biggest fan, I'll follow you until you love me, papa-paparazzi". This trend takes its audio from Lady Gaga's pop hit "Paparazzi". Participants of the trend will use the sound to describe meeting someone they are a fan of. @lookingforlewys used the audio for their love of the creator of Diet Coke.

"B.O.T.A." by Eliza Rose & Interplanetary Criminal stand for "Baddest of Them All". It is an empowering song and the latest of audios for those wishing to show off their fashion tastes. Users of the audio will use the TikTok sound to showcase their model walk or clothing ensembles.

MORNING MIMOSAS

The Nomads Mimosa Fest brought mimosa lovers to their Southtown location to try new and innovative samples of the coveted brunch drink. To close out the summer, Nomads hosted their second Mimosa Fest brunch and day party on Oct. 9, which featured over 10 signature mimosas. Fayetteville locals showed up to Nomads Southtown early due to limited parking, seating and supplies. The staff at Nomads said last summer the mimosa festival served around 6,000 mimosas. Locals could purchase VIP tickets ahead of the event for $25. VIP tickets reserved a table inside and guaranteed each VIP a signature glass they could take home. Additional refills of their drink cost 75 cents. Non-VIPs could participate in the event with the same refill price, but their first mimosas cost $7 and were seated outside. Shamia Michelle has attended the festival several times and said she would go again. Michelle said, "I enjoyed the event so much and my favorite part was seeing all the different flavors, as well as the champagne gun guy going around spraying everyone."

CAMPUS COFFEE

Coffee shops on and around campus have become the go-to study spot for many students. With five coffee shops on campus, and many more surrounding, there are plenty of options. On campus are Hill Coffee Co., Arsaga's and Starbucks. Popular spots in Fayetteville include Puritan Coffee on Dickson Street, Basecamp Coffee Company on College Avenue, and Doomsday located on Watson Street.

George's Majestic Lounge

Copy by Kana Matsukawa

George's Majestic Lounge, the oldest and longest-running live venue in Arkansas organized an event called "70s night" on October 19th.

At the event, people were expected to come out dressed up in 1970s disco-like costumes and dance to 1970s-themed indie music. Attendees gathered in a disco room and danced all together.

Ashley Worthey, a DJ based in Northwest Arkansas performed at the event.

It was me DJing a "70s style disco musical night," she said. It was my first time ever performing at the George's Majestic Lounge, and it was really fun. I got to meet George's staff who are all super nice."

She said she felt the turnout was good — 50 to 60 people joined the event.

I saw a lot of new faces, people from old shows I played, and there was a really diverse crowd like in age," Worthey said. I would love to play at George's again, do "70s night again and I will do it all over again."

The Lady Razorbacks take on Texas A&M on October 21st at 7:00pm. In a close match, the Lady Razorbacks manages to win with a close score 3-2.

THE TIMELINE (Taylor's Version)

Breaking records, expectations and even Ticketmaster, Taylor Swift's new album Midnights took Razorbacks and everyone else by storm. Students streamed Anti-Hero, sang along to Midnight Rain, danced to Bejeweled and traveled hundreds of miles to see songs performed live in the Eras Tour, which highlighted songs from all of the singers various eras." And for the non-Swifties on campus, the songs were still known for dominating TikTok videos and the charts. Plus, we'll never know exactly how many students sat in hour long queues waiting for a chance at a concert ticket. Flip through page 43, to see more information on the album, tour, controversy, awards and everything else Midnights related.

AUG. 28, 2022

At the Video Music Awards, Taylor Swift announced that she will be releasing a new album: Midnights. After winning video of the year, Taylor states that it might be a fun moment to tell [viewers] about the new album.

A HOG HALLO-WEEKEND

OCTOBER 21

Swift's new album Midnights drops at midnight. The album contains 13 tracks, which are meant to be about 13 late nights from the singer's life. Three hours later the 3 a.m. version of the album dropped which had seven additional songs.

NOVEBER 1

Fans quickly frenzied over the Eras tour, which was announced on Swift's social media platforms and on Good Morning America. The tour was to pay homage to all of the singer's eras and was the first time she toured since YEAR.

NOVEBER 1-9

The Department of Music has over 300 students and 35 graduate students with a faculty of 50 nationally and internationally recognized scholars, pedagogues and musicians. The program offers degrees at the bachelor and master levels, a one-year intensive performer's certificate and an online certificate in music education for special needs students, according to the university homepage.

The music program here is very diverse," Professor Catalina Ortega, a flute instructor at the university, said. We have a lot of ensembles where students can go and play and have the opportunity to be a part of the big ensembles such as marching bands, concert bands, orchestra and quintet."

BA music major and freshman Madelene Amox said her experience with wind symphony is especially her favorite part about the program.

All the facilities are really great resources," Amox said. They make learning music really fun and enjoyable."

NOVEMBER 4

Eight new dates were added to the tour list. The tour was only hitting major stadiums and already had ## dates on the list.

NOVEMBER 11

Taylor adds seventeen additional dates to the US leg of the Eras Tour, making the list over fifty shows long. In just this country alone, Taylor was scheduled to play in 18 different states.

NOVEMBER 15

Ticketmaster verified fans have access to buying seats at 10 a.m. their local time, but by 12:04 p.m. TIMEZONE, the site crashed. After the crash, a statement was released saying that, There has been historically unprecedented demand with millions showing up to buy tickets for the TaylorSwiftTix Presale." The company also asked people to stay in their queue, but West Coast sales times were pushed back to 3 p.m. PT. The Capital One onsale was also pushed until the following afternoon.

The 2022 Homecoming celebration is the 100th Homecoming that has take place on the Hill. This year the 100th Homecoming Queen was named along with the seventh King, and over 70,000 people were in attendance to watch the Razorbacks take the field on Nov. 5. Students, alumni and fans packed into Reynolds Stadium for the Homecoming game against Liberty University. The Razorbacks ended up being only a few points short, and the game ended with a score of 21-19.

Linebacker Bumper Pool was awarded the Crip Hall award following the game. This award is given to the most outstanding senior on Homecoming" and is chosen by members of the Arkansas Media Corp who are covering the game.

The first Crip Hall award was given in 1950 and was named after Claris Gustavus Crip" Hall, former Arkansas Secretary of State and avid Razorback football fan.

NOVEMBER 17

Via Twitter, Ticketmaster announce that general sales, which were planned to start the next morning at 10 local time zones, would be pushed back due to extraordinarily high demands."

NOVEMBER 18

Swift said the following via Instagram story: Well. It goes without saying that I'm extremely protective of my fans. We've been doing this for decades together and over the years, I've brought so many elements of my career in house. I've done this SPECIFICALLY to improve the quality of my fans' experience by doing it myself with my team who care as much about my fans as I do. It's really difficult for me to trust an outside entity with these relationships and loyalties, and excruciating for me to just watch mistakes happen with no recourse. There are a multitude of reasons why people had such a hard time trying to get tickets and I'm trying to figure out how this situation can be improved moving forward. I'm not going to make excuses for anyone because we asked them, multiple times, if they could handle this kind of demand and we were assured they could. It's truly amazing that 2.4 million people got tickets, but it really pisses me off that a lot of them feel like they went several bear attacks to get them.

And to those who didn't get tickets, all I can say is that my hope is to provide more opportunities for us to all get together and sing these songs. Thank you for wanting to be there. You have no idea how much that means.

DARK SIDE OF THE MOON

After almost 50 years, NASA attempted to return to the moon on Nov. 16 for the first time since Apollo 17 in 1972.

The attempt was part of a collection of spaceflights under the agency's Artemis program.

The program will launch the first woman and first person of color to land on the moon, according to the New York Times.

Shannon Sitrone hosted a written conversation about the questions surrounding the Artemis launch, including the financial costs and if there's anything to be gained by sending humans to space. This conversation was with Leroy Chiao, a retired NASA astronaut, Lori Graver, former deputy administrator of NASA and David Grinspoon, an astrobiologist.

Simon asked how everyone felt about NASA's return to the moon after almost 50 years.

In response to the question, all of them said they had mixed feelings about sending humans to the moon again. They also mentioned the astronomical expense of the technology used to get to space and how it's ultimately unsustainable.

Chiao talked about how it's been a long time since NASA landed humans on the moon.

SpaceX, on the other hand, has made tremendous progress since starting not long before 2004," Chiao said. "I would bet on SpaceX to land humans on the moon before NASA."

All of them expressed concerns about the sustainability of creating a presence on the moon due to the high costs and the politics. However, they hoped the mission would be successful.

"I hope that we have a successful mission," Chiao said.

Washington County residents voted on various issues in the Nov. 8 election, and many of the outcomes differed from Arkansas as a whole.

Sarah Huckabee Sanders was elected as Arkansas governor, but Washington County voters preferred Chris Jones.

Issue 4 on the ballot would have legalized marijuana for adults. 51.67% of Washington County voted for the amendment, but Arkansas as a whole voted against it.

Arkansans and Washington County residents both voted against the amendment that would allow the state legislature to call itself into a special session, along with the one that'd require a 60% yes vote to adopt constitutional amendments.

Washington County residents elected Sarah Moore as the Fayetteville city councilmember for Ward 2, knocking Mark Kinion out of his previously held spot. They also voted against a sales and use tax increase for jail improvement.

Every year, the employees of The City of Fayetteville Parks and Recreation Department install over 500,000 LED lights for the Lights of the Ozarks.

The lights are open to the public Nov. 18-Jan. 1.

Junior Isabella Gueno, like many others, have seen the lights turn as a yearly tradition.

I went to the Lights of the Ozarks when they opened up this past

Friday," Gueno said. My favorite part of the night is the parade. I love when the little kiddos feel like superstars on the floats."

Gueno said she had a great experience at the Lights of the Ozarks. Her roommates wanted to see the lighting of the square to kick off the Christmas season.

Besides the lights, I walked around and there were lots of food trucks and vendors," Gueno said. After the lights, Puritan offered a Name that Tune' Holiday Trivia night and most of the people who went to the lights attended that after. I love that Fayetteville has this opportunity for the community to come together and get in the Christmas spirit."

Gueno plans to go back next year as it is a tradition for her and her roommates.

Everyone needs to experience this in their time in Fayetteville," Gueno said.

CHARLES ROBINSON NAMED CHANCELLOR

Copy by Alyssa Riley

Since Aug. 16, 2021, Charles F. Robinson, Ph.D., 56, has served as interim chancellor of our very own University of Arkansas. Through the COVID-19 pandemic, discussing with students about the removal of the Brough name and the Fulbright statue, and much more, Robinson has served the university well in the past two years. However, it became time for bigger things; on Nov. 16, 2022, Robinson was selected as chancellor by the U of A's Board of Trustees, and on April 20, 2023, he was officially and formally invested at the university's seventh chancellor, and the first Black chancellor, making it a historic day for Arkansas. I'm looking forward to serving our campus in its entirety," Robinson said in a press release. And greatly appreciate the support and confidence shown in me to lead the university and advance our land-grant mission." Robinson received his Bachelor of Arts from the University of Houston. He went on to earn his Ph.D. in history at UH after receiving his Master of Arts at Rice University. Following his education, he served as Vice Provost for Diversity Affairs at the University of Arkansas for over four years before taking on the role of Vice Chancellor for Diversity and Community, which he has been doing for about 12 years. Additionally, Robinson is the first director of the UA

African and African American Studies Program to become chancellor. Following the student celebration, the investiture ceremony was held at the Faulkner Performing Arts Center where those who know him and his work best spoke about him, including Governor Sarah Huckabee Sanders. Additionally, Robinson discussed with attendees the 150 Forward planning process and observations about the U of A's land-grant mission. The university, its students, staff and alumni look forward to witnessing Robinson's reign as Arkansas' seventh chancellor and how he improves our beloved campus and its environment in the years to follow.

A SWEET SURPRISE IN SPACE

Copy by S. E. Silliman || Photo licensed under Creative Commons Attribution 2.0 Generic License

Marshmallows aren't just for hot cocoa this winter season—in the Auriga Constellation 580 light-years away from Earth, scientists discovered a planet with the density of a marshmallow orbiting a red dwarf star in late October. Planet TOI-3757 was initially discovered through NASA's Transiting Exoplanet Survey Satellite (TESS) on a routine data collection. Since then, several tests were conducted that helped scientists better identify the planet. A team in Tucson, Arizona located the planet using a large telescope from Kitt Peak National Observatory. Planet TOI-3757 b, dubbed "Marshmallow Planet," by several online sources, has a density of 17 grams per cubic foot and orbits its star in 3 ½ days. Planet TOI-3757, a gas giant with an estimated diameter of 150,000km, has a density one-quarter that of water. To put this in perspective, Planet TOI-3757 is almost twice the size of Jupiter and could float among rubber ducks in a bubble bath.

The discovery of the marshmallow planet is unprecedented, but this does not mean that it is completely uncertain.

While the field of science at large is perplexed by the existence of Planet TOI-3757 b, they have been quick to come up with potential explanations.

One of the leading theories on why is because it is so hot that the gas is expanding and puffs up the planet," Dr. Paul Bonney, a graduate assistant in the university's astronomy department, said. It is kind of almost pulled apart by the star."

The second leading theory mentions that the core of the planet is less solid than most, which allowed more gas to seep into the planet over time.

We'll be seeing a lot more of this kind of stuff in the future," Bonney said.

We're getting a lot better at ground based telescopes and we can see so many new targets."

The scientific community expressed excitement in regards to the discovery and hopes it will lead to similar findings in the future.

Is Thanksgiving worth the hype? In my opinion, it is without a doubt. Thanksgiving is a holiday that allows families and friends to come together, and that alone makes it such a special time. One of my own favorite Thanksgiving memories would be the year my extended family visited my brother, parents and I abroad. Growing up overseas, Thanksgiving was not always a holiday I enjoyed because I had never had a genuine experience with it. When my family flew to spend the holiday with us overseas, it changed the meaning of Thanksgiving for me, and I finally got to experience the joy of spending time with my loved ones during such a special time. Another added bonus is the great food that comes with it – turkey, stuffing, rolls, mashed potatoes, mac and cheese, green bean casserole and assorted pies – the Thanksgiving essentials. When people prefer everyday sandwiches or pasta over this elaborate feast, I definitely can't relate. Thanksgiving has always been one of the best days of the year. There is nothing more enjoyable than the happiness of the holidays, quality time with my family and great food.

WEDNESDAY

Netflix's new supernatural comedy Wednesday covers the life of the famous Addams daughter as she unpacks a mysterious set of murders while navigating teenage life at her new school.

The eight-part season has taken the Internet by storm with its suspense-filled turns and intertwined romance. The series begins with Wednesday's relocation to Nevermore Academy, the school at which her parents fell in love many years before.

Within her first few moments at the academy, Addams soon realizes there are dark mysteries lurking at Nevermore.

Her daring confidence and independence capture the audience's attention at every step.

While anxiously trying to separate herself from her mother's lasting impression and familial ties to Nevermore, Wednesday discovers the Addams family is more connected to the school's strange occurrences than she thought.

She also begins to wonder if it is all linked to her budding psychic abilities.

Wednesday features a number of young actors and actresses including Jenny Ortega, Emma Myers and Hunter Doohan. Jenny Ortega, who stars as Wednesday, received much praise for her role.

After Wednesday hit Netflix, Ortega's social media influence skyrocketed. Today, she boasts over 40 million followers on Instagram.

Fans are eager for Addams' next steps in Wednesday season two, which was confirmed less than two months after the first season aired.

The next season is set to hit Netflix sometime in 2024.

The 2022 FIFA World Cup unfolded in Qatar with an exciting final game that ended with Argentina taking home the FIFA World Cup trophy. Soccer fans gathered to watch the matches around campus, from dorm rooms to the Union.

The match between Argentina and France was close and intense, and the deciding factor was based on penalty kicks with a score of 4-2. This win for Argentina makes it their third World Cup title, following the titles in 1978 and 1986.

The U.S. Men's National Team made it all the way to the Round of 16, but fell to the Netherlands with a final score of 3-1. During the World Cup, U.S. players such as Christian Pulisic were heavily supported during the team's run in the Round of 32 and the Round of 16.

There were many other talented players on the pitch, such as Lionel Messi who plays forward for Argentina. Messi won the Golden Ball Award, which is given to the all-around best player or, in more common terms, the most valuable player.

Kylian Mbappe, who plays for the French team, played a major role in the team's world title in 2018. In the final game, Mbappe became the second person in World Cup history to succeed in a hat trick, which is where a player scores at least three goals in a single game. Because of this legendary feat, he received the Golden Boot Award, which goes to the leading goalscorer in the game.

The World Cup, first played in 1930, allows the world to be a part of a tournament and tradition that gives the audience the opportunity to put everything aside and sit down with friends and family to watch the high intensity game of soccer and cheer for their country's team.

Jennette McCurdy, a retired actress and writer, appeared on the Distinguished Lectures Committee's series at 7 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 5 at the Fayetteville Town Center. She delivered a moderated Q&A and was interviewed by University of Arkansas professor Jen Velleux and student Josie Zakrewski. McCurdy shared her life of ups and downs, which she mentioned in her newly-released memoir I'm Glad My Mom Died, at the banquet room, which was almost completely full, according to the Student Affairs Bulletin. She talked about her experience in therapy and breaking down due to her mental health disorder. She also discussed how she struggled and overcame eating disorders and unrealistic goals for body image. Sophomore Natalie Murphy decided to attend because she grew up watching McCurdy on iCarly and had heard really great things about her book. I think, for me, the most memorable part of the event was watching McCurdy tear up while talking about how happy she is to inspire and work with women through her book," Murphy said.

The Razorbacks won 55-53 against the Kansas Jayhawks at the Liberty Bowl with a nail-biting triple overtime to push the Hogs 7-6 overall in the season.

Quarterback KJ Jefferson made a strategic pass to running back Rashod Dubinion during the third overtime, propelling the Hogs to a score of 55.

During the Jayhawks two-point conversion attempt to tie, the ball was overthrown by Kansas quarterback Jalon Daniels, securing a Razorbacks win.

This year's Liberty Bowl was the highest scoring game in Liberty Bowl history, with a cumulative total of 108 points. This victory was also the second consecutive bowl win for the Razorbacks, following the win against Penn State last year at the Outback Bowl.

Pinpoint Fayetteville is the first and only pinball bar in Arkansas located on Block Avenue. Guests enjoyed a special holiday menu and decor at Pinpoint during Christmas time.

Bo Counts, the owner of the bar, said Christmas has been an important event for his family for a long time due to celebratory and festive reasons.

We love to decorate and entertain people, and it turned into this tradition that we used to do with family, then opened it up to friends and took over my bar with it," Counts said. The bar was open every day but Monday during holidays, and they served around 800 to 1000 guests a night on Saturdays.

Counts said he likes seeing each guest's look on their face when they come down the steps because they're blown away by the decoration.

When you are serving a thousand guests a night, it's a lot of work, but it's worth it," Counts said.

TIME RUNS OUT ON TIK TOK

Photograph by S. Wittenburg

University officials banned TikTok on university devices and networks in a campus-wide email sent Tuesday, Jan. 24.

Associate Vice Chancellor Mark Rushing said in the email this decision was made in the best interest of information security for the UA system.

TikTok is now blocked on UA's wi-fi network, which spans across the entire campus, but students can still access TikTok using their personal mobile data.

The email required students and staff to deactivate UA-affiliated TikTok accounts and remove the application from UA devices by Wednesday, Jan. 25.

This decision was made after Gov. Sanders issued an executive order to ban the installation of TikTok on state devices and networks to protect state information from Chinese government influence.

Chinese company ByteDance LTD. owns TikTok and has significant ties to the Chinese Communist Party, according to the executive order.

Chinese companies are required to assist in China's intelligence operations, including sharing data with their government.

TikTok gathers information including purchase information, device contacts and voiceprints, according to their privacy policy. TikTok has confirmed that China-based employees can access data regarding the Internet activity of people located in the United States, according to the executive order.

"[China] is a foreign adversary that presents serious challenges to our values, our security, and our economy," the executive order said. "The challenges posed by China are particularly acute with respect to information and communications technologies."

Rushing said the IT Help Desk is available for questions related to the university's network.

MLK DAY

This January, the university partnered with the Northwest Arkansas Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Council to honor the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King. Many organizations on campus came together to celebrate the legacy of distributing love, equality and freedom that MLK worked so hard to forge.

A number of different events were scheduled, starting on Saturday, Jan. 14 and ending on Monday. Each event was co-sponsored by a local organization as well as a campus organization. The message of the event was Distribute Love-The foundation of the Beloved Community”.

On Saturday, Asbell Elementary served by donating winter hats, gloves, socks and sweaters. January in Fayetteville can get unbearably cold at times. These donations embodied the spirit of MLK by spreading love and equality to those in need. This event was co-sponsored by the Omicron Zeta Lambda Chapter of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity on campus. Alpha Phi Alpha also hosted the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Service held at the Historic St. James Missionary Baptist church in Fayetteville. On Monday, the university's athletes and intramural sports teams hosted an engagement program for NWA youth, located at the HPER Building on campus. This event, the MLK Dream Keepers Youth Engagement Program, recognizes and honors MLK as well as other individuals who were brave enough to stand up for what was right.

The Distribute Love event concluded with a MLK Jr. Noon Day Vigil, held at the Faulkner Performing Arts Center. The ASG and Black Students Association joined together to bring local and campus organizations together to honor and remember the legacy of MLK.

NEW YEAR'S TRADITIONS

New Year's Eve is a holiday that can be celebrated in many different ways.

Various traditions have become popular, and many families have developed specific routines for the holiday.

My family eats black-eyed peas on

New Year's Eve. We've done it for as long as I can remember,” sophomore Amy Abokhair said. Since I was a kid, my parents have warned me that if I didn't eat them, I would have nothing but bad luck in the New Year.”

Friends from school visited her for New Year's last year and got to partake in the tradition.

Although they were unsure if the tradition had any truth to it, they were glad to have had the opportunity to celebrate the New Year in a different way.

SNOW WEEK

Freshmen Parker Gregory, Jabe Lovett, Sam Vinson, Alexa Morgan, Chandler Gibson, and Brennan Stelting spent the snow day to make a snowman outside Yocuum Hall. It was nice logging on to my lecture halls from the comfort of my dorm and getting to spend time with friends over the snow week," Vinson said. Mississippi native, Madelyn Abraham enjoyed her first Arkansas snow with sledding and building a snowman. The snow-week began on Jan.

FROZEN TOES 5K

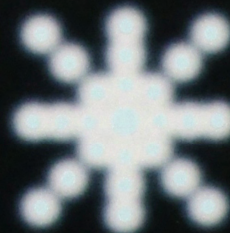

The eighth annual Frozen Toes 5K and 15K Trail Run was a rousing success this year, as walkers and runners from the community and university brought their warmest clothes and great enthusiasm.

Runners from beginner level to expert enjoyed the trail at Kessler Mountain Regional Park for the one-of-a-kind Ozark Mountain view and the technical aspects of the course.

All participants received custom-designed socks and finisher medals, along with food and drinks.

This early morning race is the perfect way to experience the natural beauties of Northwest Arkansas and take advantage of the unique opportunities that the mountains provide.

ARKANSAS BLACK MUSIC AND FILM EXPO

White, Black, young, old — people of all backgrounds crowded into George's Majestic Lounge and clapped along to jazz. Little kids danced by the stage. Others swayed in their seats. The Arkansas Black Music Expo comes as state leaders place new restrictions on how African American history is taught in schools. Music Moves organizes culture-focused events like this to educate and unite citizens of all ages in a non-politicized way. This is our way of including and educating and celebrating," Music Moves Vice President Anthony Ball said. This is our contribution to healing a broken piece of our nation, to combat a negative history of America and move forward in a way with unity, with humanity and a better grasp of equal." Music Moves President Reginald James said he's encouraged by the support of Black culture in Fayetteville and sees music as a vessel for important educational conversations. The Black Music Expo occurred during Black History Month for a reason — they wanted to encourage interest in African American culture. James said Black history doesn't get the acknowledgement it should. He said once people recognize the contributions in the music sphere, they'll hopefully strive to learn more about Black history, which is controversial in Arkansas politics.

Fayetteville found this event as a way to celebrate Black History Month, but culture wars are raging in Little Rock with efforts to end affirmative action, bolster private schools and limit Black history education. One of Gov. Sarah Huckabee Sanders' first political moves in January banned Critical Race Theory, which is a way people understand how racism impacts America. The executive order said schools should educate, not indoctrinate students." Sanders also released an executive order that recognized the importance of honoring African American culture during Black History Month, but a close government eye will now be drawn to how that history is taught in schools. The Department of Education will review materials that might indoctrinate students with an idea that people of one race are superior or inferior to others.

While the Arkansas Legislature might limit how teachers share Black history with students, University of Arkansas Music Department Chair Lia Uribe said Black music education is not up for debate.

What is so beautiful and powerful about music or art in general is they're not necessarily up for discussion," Uribe said. It's a way to bring people together." The conversation about racial education is complicated because of competing opinions, but Uribe said she's grateful the university can share music freely. The University of Arkansas recently launched a new Center for Black Music, which Uribe said is a beautiful opportunity to highlight identities that aren't typically at the forefront of education. By supporting music, you're not only enjoying the beauty of what the arts have to offer and the reflections that arts have to offer, but also challenging the system," Uribe said. Uribe said tangible change is only possible if the community works together. Music Moves is all about that.

Jeffrey Allen Murdock, who leads the Center for Black Music, collaborated with Music Moves to design a curriculum so teachers can share Black music with their students.

To our delight and to their delight, students were very interested," James said. I think it's going to open up conversations in the future — honestly conversations that my parents or grandparents could only dream about." James said he hopes when students learn about African Americans' crucial part in developing popular styles like blues, jazz and Gospel, they'll gain a new perspective on the importance of their history. Even through state-wide political division about how Black history should be taught in schools, the Fayetteville community united to celebrate Black music and culture. Ball said the Music Expo was a success, and he's looking forward to future events. It was a time for us to bring people together using the tool of Black music that's always been a bridge to bring people together of all backgrounds," Ball said.

LIBRARY GRANT

Copy by Riley Atkinson

The university libraries received a $25,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to support the Arkansas Folks and Traditional Arts' Community Scholar Program, which is designed to document, present and sustain Arkansas's traditional arts and cultural heritage. The program helps provide resources like free training to people such as historians and artists who want to learn more about how to document their traditions and communities' stories.

"We've been doing this program for about two years," Program Coordinator Virginia Siegel said.

"This grant helps us be able to continue and expand it," Siegel said she is grateful for this opportunity because the grant is essential so the program can contribute to the preservation of Arkansas's heritage from generation to generation.

"We are really appreciative of this support from the National Endowments for the Arts because their support is pretty vital to us to be able to grow the program," Siegel said.

The Panhellenic Council organized a program with Chancellor

Dr. Charles Robinson to celebrate Black History Month.

Hundreds of members attended the event to learn from Dr. Robinson, who spoke about his personal experiences and explained how black history has impacted the campus. Sophomore Madeline Jeffries said Dr. Robinson did a great job with the event. She said he wasn't just reading off slides — his presentation was more of a discussion than a lecture.

He was very captivating, very engaging," Jeffries said.

Everyone in there was very engaged in the conversation, so I definitely feel like people learned from going."

Jeffries also enjoyed that Dr. Robinson spent time thoroughly listening to questions from the attendees.

The questions were really what I enjoyed most and where I got the most insight because he was very open and honest," Jeffries said. Jeffries said she thinks conversations like these are crucial so students continue to educate themselves about topics that aren't always covered thoroughly in their classes.

Having a safe space where people can ask questions and also learn is really important because I think some people close themselves off to those discussions," Jeffries said.

SILENT BOOK CLUB

The Graduate Fayetteville started Silent book Club with Pearl's Books, an independent bookstore in Fayetteville.

The event takes place once a month at 6 p.m. on the second Wednesday in the hotel lobby. Participants get together, bring their own book and enjoy reading in the community.

It's good for introverts — get out of the shells a little bit, go sit and read.,” Daniel Jordan, co-owner of Pearl's Bookstore and co-host of the silent book club, said. You don't have to talk or have a lot of conversations if you don't want to.”

The event allows participants to meet new people who also love reading. It encourages people to share their recommendations, talk about the books they're reading and make friends, according to the Graduate Fayetteville.

Jordan also participates in the as a co-host, and said there are usually 15 people who show up at each event, and most of them are young adults. He likes hosting the Silent Book Club with the Graduate Fayetteville because it expands the network outside of the bookstore, Jordan said.

I think it's good for us to have an event like this,” Jordan said. Just seeing people outside the store is always nice.”

J's Live hosted a Harry Styles themed dance party on Friday, Feb. 10.

The event featured DJ Shortfuze, who played a mix of Styles' discography while displaying pictures and videos of the singer on a screen behind him.

Additionally, the venue offered themed photo opportunities including a photobooth with a cardboard cutout of Styles.

It was really cool to be at an event with other fans of Harry," sophomore Ava Lund said. "I had a lot of fun being in that environment with my friends." The event also offered customized cocktails, including a sparkling wine inspired by Styles' song "Grapejuice", a lemon cocktail inspired by "Sunflower, Vol. 6" and a watermelon kiwi margarita inspired by "Watermelon Sugar" and "Kiwi".

"I loved hearing other people singing along to songs like 'Keep Driving' and 'Two Ghosts' because I feel like those are songs that people don't listen to if they aren't fans," Ava said.

Rihanna took the stage at the Super Bowl Halftime show this year and left the audience with some unexpected twists. Sophomore Emma Foster has waited to see Rihanna ever since Beyoncé performed.

"I think everyone is a fan of Rihanna," Foster said. "I mean, everyone my age grew up listening to her. I'm not gonna say I'm not a fan." Foster hoped to hear some of her favorite Rihanna hits, including Umbrella, Pon de Replay and songs from the Anti album. However, she feels like the setlist could have used more from her older discography.

"I don't think she used enough of her 2010s hits," Foster said. "If she did, it was a short bit and not really enough." She was also intrigued by the show's choreography.

"When I first watched it, I thought it was a little weird, but I mean, ...it's Rihanna, so you can't hate it," Foster said. "It fit with her more recent vibe." Rihanna also used the performance to announce her pregnancy of her second child with rapper A$AP Rocky. Foster said she wasn't too surprised to see this.

"I already saw rumors about it before, but then it was confirmed [during the show]."

MARCH

PROTESTATIONS EN FRANCE

President Emmanuel Macron's decision to raise the pension age was met with fierce uproar from French citizens on March 23, 2023. Millions swarmed the capital city of Paris in protest, with crowds extending out to neighboring cities. Among these crowds were teachers, labor unions and railway workers who joined in solidarity. The new legislation would raise the retirement age from 62 to 64 by 2030, following the lead of other European countries who have also raised their pension ages. This was due to the number of retirees surpassing the total number of workers in France, which stemmed from an increase in life expectancy. Macron's plan also attempts to alleviate the country from economic hardships caused by the Ukrainian War. French citizens are worried this new legislation will throw off their work-life balance. France is known for its strong protection of social rights, especially in the domain of labor laws. Citizens believe that the new retirement age is a step backwards in what France once fought so hard to achieve. However, this was not the first time Macron's pension plan was met with opposition. The Yellow Vest movement that began in 2018 also fought against the increase in pensions proposed by Macron.

Its notoriety ultimately led the president to pass it into law without the vote of parliament. This is yet another action being protested by the public. As a result of the labor strikes, public services such as transportation and education were the most impacted. The Paris Metro system experienced extensive disruption and the high congestion of protestors obstructed traffic. Teachers and students protested, leaving schools and colleges unattended. Garbage collection was also impacted, causing large piles of trash and rubble from violent protests to accumulate throughout the capital. About 457 arrests were made by Mar. 23 as some protests turned violent. Garbage piles were lit on fire, protestors were sprayed with tear gas and some authorities were left injured by miscellaneous objects being thrown at them.

"We will yield nothing to violence, I condemn violence with the utmost strength," President Macron responded to the destruction in a news conference. The days of civil unrest are projected to continue well into the following months as labor unions plan to carry on demonstrations on May 1, which is International Workers Day.

A Saturday staple for Fayetteville natives, the Farmer's Market is a key component of what makes Fayetteville funky.

There is much to be seen at the Farmer's Market from fruits and vegetables galore to activist groups to food trucks abound.

The event sets up shop around the Fayetteville Square year round on Saturdays with Tuesday and Thursday hours added during the summer season.

It is a great place to support local artisans and workers while connecting with friends among the fresh flower bouquets.

ST. PADDY'S FESTIVITIES

St. Patrick's Day in Fayetteville consists of a variety of activities to celebrate. This year, several bars on Dickson Street and in the surrounding areas of Fayetteville organized pub crawls or discounted drinks to celebrate. One brewing company in Fayetteville, Crisis Brewing Company, celebrated by hiring Irish musicians and dancers. They hosted an event where McCloud's Ceili Band performed authentic Irish music with students from the Rince Arkansas Academy of Irish Dance. Additionally, they put all Irish ales on sale for $3.17. The bars on Dickson Street also hosted their annual bar crawl, with stops at popular spots like Sideways, Bugsy's, the Piano Bar, Yeekawg and others. While these activities may be fun for residents of Fayetteville who are 21+, there is still plenty to do for those who are not, including dressing up for the holiday by wearing green, participating in a celebratory feast, running in the St. Patrick's Day 5/10k and Shamrock Kids' Run, or attending any local St. Patrick's Day parades. Additionally, many sororities and fraternities planned celebratory events or activities themed around St. Patrick's Day. Sophomore Becca McKinney participated in the 5/10k run. It felt good to celebrate St. Patrick's Day in a different way," she said. I'm from Chicago, and they celebrate pretty intensely. They literally dye the river green there, so it's definitely a huge difference."

PALTROW V. SANDERSON

Copy by Riley Atkinson Design by Hannah Cunningham

Actress Gwyneth Paltrow was found not guilty in March after being sued for an alleged hit-and-run ski crash back in 2016. Terry Sanderson, a retired optometrist, initially filed the lawsuit against Paltrow in 2019, stating the ski accident left him with permanent brain damage after suffering a concussion among other serious injuries. Sanderson claimed Paltrow was recklessly skiing down the slopes of Utah's Deer Valley Resort when she collided into him from behind, plowing him down and landing on top of him. Craig Ramon, a witness of the crash, testified she left the scene shortly after without offering any help, despite seeing Sanderson still on the ground. However, Paltrow's lawyer Stephen Owens shed light to a completely different version of events. In his opening statement, Owens rebuts it was Sanderson who crashed into Paltrow as he was trying to avoid other skiers. Paltrow also took the stand to testify, stating she felt a pair of skis tangle with hers and a body press into her back. Sanderson initially asked for over $3 million in damage but later reduced the amount to $300,000. Paltrow countersued, claiming he was only striving to exploit her wealth. The jury ultimately found the actress not guilty and granted her the $1 amount she countersued him for.

I don't think she really cared about the money," freshman Samantha West said. She could have sued him for a lot of money, but she didn't." According to Paltrow, the meager amount she asked for was symbolic" for how the consequences of the accident could have been much worse.

APRIL

INDICTMENT OF DONALD TRUMP

Former president Donald Trump was publicly accused of sexual assault by multiple people, including Stormy Daniels, throughout his 2016 campaign. Daniels claimed that the former president bribed her into not coming forward about the assault. Trump was accused of falsifying business records in an attempt to remove any allegations of sexual misconduct from the public eye in relation to Daniels.

Trump was officially indicted by the state of New York on March 30, 2023 with 34 felony counts of falsifying business records. Concerns surrounding the credibility of Trump as an individual have been present since before he was elected into office in 2016.

It's not about anything actually coming from the case," senior Carson Hardin said. It [the indictment] puts it in legal standing that he is a predator and a felon, which is a lot on its own."

During his presidency Trump was put under investigation due to rising concerns of voter fraud and connections with Russia. This appears to have opened the door for the current trial because it led to the arrest of his former personal attorney Michael Cohen.

Cohen served as Trump's attorney from 2006 to 2018 and pleaded guilty to tax evasion and campaign finance violations in 2018. Several other organizations linked to Trump have since been found to have committed tax fraud.

After being found not guilty in two separate impeachment hearings, Trump has pleaded not guilty in Trump v. New York. Information regarding the case is largely classified as of May 2023 so it is unclear what information will be presented at trial.

A hearing for Trump's case is scheduled for December 2023. The trial itself is anticipated to take place in March 2024. Trump is still being subjected to investigation by the federal government, but it is unclear whether the Department of Justice will pursue any legal action against the former president.

Aminé, a rapper with over 8 billion monthly Spotify listeners, performed at the Springtime of Youth Music Festival on Saturday, April 22. Headliners Concert Committee sponsors and plans this annual event through the Office of Student Activities. Committee member and junior Ellie Rhodes said they spend months lining up artists to bring their peers together.

I think it's so powerful that something as broad as music can bring people from all sorts of different backgrounds together," Rhodes said. The person standing next to you singing the same lyrics as you might be someone you've never met, but now you have a connection because y'all both love this song." Rock band Grouplove and indie singer Faye Webster joined Aminé to perform at the event.

The Headliners Instagram account announced these artists as the committee determined who would officially perform. Rhodes said the artist booking process takes time, but it's very exciting. Students are typically shocked by the lineup, according to Rhodes. She said those who haven't heard of Headliners are completely surprised that they're able to book major artists.

It makes them get a sense of feeling special," Rhodes said. Like our campus is so cool that we can have these people come and we can have this break before finals." This year, the festival fell on a chilly day, so Rhodes was curious to see how many people would bear the cold.

OF OUR YOUTH

It was a great turnout," Rhodes said. We loved seeing people come out even though it was cold — that's just dedication to the artists." Several committee members plan to enter the entertainment industry post-graduation, and Rhodes said the festival planning experience sets them up for future success. The committee learns from guest speakers like music managers or lighting controllers before the planning process starts. They also have the opportunity to network with professionals at the festival like artist managers. Rhodes is grateful she's gotten the opportunity to learn different aspects of the industry while planning a unifying event for the university.

It's very powerful that people can come together and be together through music," Rhodes said. That's why I love being a part of Headliners and anything in the music industry."

THE TRIUMPH OF TAYLOR SWIFT'S TOUR

Sophomore Maria Schueler saw people hold their laptops open while walking to class as they waited for hours to buy tickets online — practically everyone she knew was talking about Taylor Swift's Eras Tour.

Schueler said their reaction wasn't "too much" because Swift is just that good. Her friend group always said they'd pay any price to go. There was no question — until the Ticketmaster fiasco.

Swift's fans were outraged on the day tickets became available because the website couldn't handle the high demand. Schueler's friend sat on the computer for nine hours to secure their tickets.

It was a legit miracle," Schueler said. Swift's tour consisted of songs from each of her albums, so fans typically dressed in an outfit inspired by their favorite era. Schueler planned her outfit the week after they got tickets — she decided to wear a black, sparkly ensemble as a mix of Fearless, Midnights and Reputation. Leading up to the concert, Schueler didn't look at social media platforms like TikTok and Instagram because she wanted to be surprised.

"We didn't want to know the setlist," Schueler said. "We didn't want to know anything so we were super surprised when we saw the concert."

They got ready around five hours before the concert and made friendship bracelets because it's a fan tradition to trade them at the show.

Schueler went to Swift's 1989 and Reputation tours, but she was too young to fully appreciate her performance. This time was different.

"This was the first concert that I paid for my own ticket, we had a journey to get there, so I was taking it all in," Schueler said. "My jaw was on the floor the entire concert, and it was fun because me and my roommates did not know what was coming next."

Schueler said it was the best concert she'd ever been to, and she gained a newfound appreciation for Swift's performing ability.

The last semester for university students can be filled with many different emotions. Senior Ema Plafcan can't believe it's already time to graduate. I've definitely had some moments where I've been freaking out," Plafcan said. I only have six weeks left, that's crazy!" But overall, she thinks she is ready for the next step. After graduation, Plafcan gets to spend the summer in Rome as part of an international communications program. I'll be taking a couple communication classes," Plafcan said.

We're also going to do visits to different monuments, which is cool." After that, she is still solidifying plans for the next step. I'm not entirely sure, but I'm kind of wanting to do an internship with the National Park Service - I think that would be really fun," Plafcan said. I have a few paths I could go down, but I'm keeping it open for now." She encourages current and future students to just keep searching for where they fit in. As far as her experience at the university, she said she's changed as a person since coming here. She said being here has helped her come out of her shell and feel more comfortable being herself, which is something she's taking with her when she leaves.

AT THE FINISH LINE

Copy by Riley Atkinson

During the closing weeks of the fall semester, students prepared themselves to tackle the final rounds of exams before taking off for their winter break. While everyone has their own method when it comes to studying, Sophomore Guadalupe Alvarado found that looking over previous notes and extra help helped them best prepare for finals. I look at supplemental instructions or the additional videos that the teachers post," Alvarado said. Alvarado, along with many other students, enjoyed studying at Mullins Library. Specifically, the fourth floor had the ideal mixture of noise and silence, which made the perfect study spot for those who preferred some background noise. Alternatively, freshman Paris Perez spent her last few days studying at the Cordia Harrington Center for Excellence.

The environment was just very nice, and there was Starbucks so I could go get a coffee if I finished," Perez said. Long hours of studying and cramming can often cause us to forget to take care of ourselves. Perez combated this by drinking plenty of water as she studied and taking breaks or watching shows in between.

Perez said self-care is an important step in preparing to ace your finals.

23 THINGS TO DO BEFORE YOU GRADUATE...

1. Cheer on the Hogs in the student section
2. Visit Crystal Bridges
3. Bar hop down Dickson Street
4. Play games at Arkadia
5. Visit the Botanical Gardens
6. Ride scooters from one end of campus to the other end with your besties; stop at different locations and talk about your favorite

7. Be food critics with your campus besties! Try a new food location each week and review them together.
8. Watch a performance at the Walton Arts Center
9. Hike through Lake Fayetteville/Lake Wedington
10. Attend a concert at George's Majestic Lounge/JJ's Live

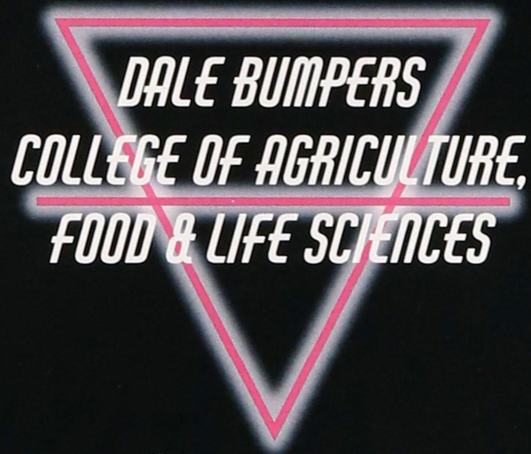

11. Go to the Fayetteville Farmers Market (when it's warm)
12. Go to Fayetteville's Funky Flea Market (when it's cold)
13. Taste test the Rick's Bakery menu
14. Watch the sunrise/sunset at Mt. Sequoyah
15. Skate at the Starlight Skatium
16. Bike down the Razorback Greenway Fayetteville Ale Trail
17. Ride the mechanical hog at YeeHawg bar
18. Receive a parking ticket on campus (Not fun, but it is a rite of passage).
19. Take a summer class and experience Fayetteville in the summer.
20. Do an all-nighter studying at Mullins library.
21. Throw snowballs on Old Main Lawn during a snow day!
22. Pop champagne in front of the Wild Band of Razorbacks fountain.
23. Get your cap and gown. Congratulations, graduates!

The Omahogs started off their 2023 season losing star pitcher, Jaxon Wiggins. Wiggins missed the season after undergoing Tommy John surgery on his elbow to repair his torn ulnar collateral ligaments (UCL). With Jaxon Wiggins on the road to recovery, the bullpen was left to rising stars Hagen Smith and Brady Tygart. Both Smith and Tygart are sophomores who came out of their freshman seasons with all eyes on them. Smith, now starting in place of Wiggins, was both Perfect Game and Collegiate Baseball Newspaper Freshman All-American, Freshman All-SEC Team, SEC Freshman of the Week for April 18 and College Baseball Foundation National Pitcher of the Week for Week 9. Tygart did not fall short of impressing the baseball community either. Last season Tygart secured Collegiate Baseball Newspaper Freshman All-American, NCBWA Freshman All-American (First Team), Perfect Game Freshman All-American (First Team), Freshman All-SEC Team and SEC Freshman of the Week for May 2. This season, Smith led the Omahogs as the true starting pitcher, while Brady Tygart continued to be a star relief pitcher to finish off games. This is the second consecutive season that the Razorbacks have lost a player in the bullpen due to a torn UCL. Last season, Peyton Pallette suffered a blown elbow and underwent surgery as well.

The Arkansas men's basketball team has thinned out since their loss in the March Madness Sweet 16. When the season ended for the Razorbacks, Barry Dunning, Derrian Ford and Makhel Mitchell entered the transfer portal. Star freshman players Nick Smith and Anthony Black, as well as junior Ricky Council IV, forfeited their NCAA eligibility and declared for the 2023 NBA Draft. All three only played for Arkansas during the 2022-23 season. Starting 36 games, Anthony Black was the glue for the Razorbacks this season. During his time playing for head coach Eric Musselman Black was named All-SEC 2nd Team and SEC All-Freshman Team. He was the only player in the SEC Top 25 in scoring, rebounding, assists, steals and blocked shots. He is also the only Razorback in history to reach 450+ points, 180+ rebounds and 140+ assists in a single season. Ricky Council did not fall short of these expectations. He led the SEC in made free throws (173), was second in free throw attempts (218), third in scoring (16.1) and third in minutes played (34:08). In a single season, Council scored 582 points, had 130 rebounds, 81 assists and 40 steals. Nick Smith carried the season as well with 17 played games and 14 starts. Smith was named two-time SEC Freshman of the Week and CBS/USBWA National Freshman of the Week. Despite losing these players to the transfer portal and draft, many players have transferred or committed to play for Arkansas in the 2023-24 season.

Photos by Razorback Athletics

The women's basketball team received an invitation to the Women's National Invitation Tournament (WNIT) where they advanced to the Great 8, ultimately losing to Kansas, 78-64. The Razorbacks began the first round of the tournament beating out Louisiana Tech in a 22 point lead. Chrissy Carr led the scoreboard of the first round with 17 points. In round two of the WNIT, Arkansas faced Stephen F. Austin, which ended in a 23-point lead against the Ladyjacks. Entering the Super 16, the Razorbacks took on Texas Tech, fighting their way to a 71-66 victory. The postseason came to an end with the loss to Kansas, leaving the Razorbacks with an admirable 24-13 record.

Men's Cross Country

The Profile

Patrick Kiprop, Arkansas' No. 20, placed 23rd in the NCAA Championships final cross-country meet held by Oklahoma State. Scoring 584 points, he led the Razorbacks to place 24th overall, while earning the honor of All-American after trekking through the 10,000-meter course in less than 30 minutes.

According to the Arkansas Razorbacks website, Patrick did a great job, got himself in the race right away," Head Coach Chris Bucknam said. He looked comfortable most of the way. To finish in the top 25 in his first Division I cross-country championship is outstanding. He stuck his nose in there and did a phenomenal job for us."

Making this the third consecutive year Arkansas has received a cross country All-American, the team now has seven total honors under their belts.

However, the placing was not exactly what they were striving for going into the championship.

As far as the team is concerned, we were looking for a top 20 finish, and didn't quite get there in placing 23rd," Bucknam said. I'm proud of this team as for how they competed. They were all dialed in, and just didn't have our best race today. We still beat some teams that finished ahead of us earlier this season like Montana State and Alabama."

Overall, the total individual placings for the Championship were 23rd, 116th, 131st, 146th and 168th.

Winning the Title

At the NCAA South Central Region cross country meet, Razorback junior Isabel Van Camp won the individual title, covering the Dale Watts Course's 6,000-meter distance in about 20 minutes. With the help of her amazing time, the Arkansas women's team took home the team title for the 11th consecutive year. According to the Arkansas Razorbacks' website, "This feels very special, especially winning a post-season race," Van Camp said. "I think more importantly than that, it was a team win and one of our better team runs of the season." All six runners in the race finished within the top 25, earning All-Region honors; they finished first, fourth, 11th, 12th and 21st with a score of 49 points.

Now we're heading to nationals, which is the ultimate goal," she said. "We definitely have our work cut out for us in Stillwater." Arkansas women's head coach, Lance Harter, noted how they held out one of their key athletes in this race to save for the national meet. "We had that luxury with the depth that we have," he said. "We could come into this meet, fight for one of the top two spots and qualify for the national championships." While celebrating their dominant win at the Dale Watts race, they look forward to the national championship, knowing that they can run even better with eight days to train. "With this race, Van Camp claimed Arkansas' 14th individual title in the NCAA South Central Region, the first since Taylor Werner in 2019. It was really fun to be running as a pack with my teammates," Van Camp said.

It was kind of let's work into it and see if we get faster as the race goes. That tends to be the case in big meets."

A Promising Future

After yet another successful winning football season for the Razorbacks, several players have entered the transfer portal, as well as the NFL Draft, to further their athletic careers at other teams. The 2023 NFL Draft has been successful for the Razorbacks this year, with seven players getting drafted. Linebacker Drew Sanders was the 67th pick in the third round of the draft, ultimately getting drafted to the Denver Broncos. The second player drafted from the Razorbacks was center Ricky Stromberg, who was the 97th pick in the third round, and he got drafted by the Washington Commanders. Among the other players drafted, Jack Bates went to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Matt Landers to the Seattle Seahawks, Dalton Wagner to the Las Vegas Raiders, Bumper Pool to the Carolina Panthers and Jadon Haselwood to the Philadelphia Eagles, the defending NFC Champions. Twenty-five players entered the transfer portal, according to the Best of Arkansas Sports website.

Among the transfer players is Simeon Blair, who transferred to Memphis after playing in the starting lineup for the Razorbacks this past season. Another notable player leaving the Razorbacks is Myles Slusher, who was formerly the star defensive back since he started with the team. There are promising players who will come to Arkansas to fill the spots. Quarterback KJ Jefferson and running back Raheim Rocket" Sanders will stay for another year.

MATEO AND MOORE IN THE MASTERS

Senior Mateo Fernandez de Oliveira and former Razorback Taylor Moore played in the 2023 Masters Tournament on April 6 at Augusta National.

Fernandez de Oliveira earned his invitation by winning the 2023 Latin American Amateur Championship by four strokes. He's the second Razorback to win the LAAC and earn a spot at the Masters.

"I believe every single kid in the world grew up hoping to play in the Masters one day," Fernandez de Oliveira said to the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette. Fernandez de Oliveira's final total score was +7.

Moore gained an invitation by winning the 2023 Valspar Championship by one stroke for his first PGA victory. This was his fourth top-15 finish of 2023. Moore's total score was +5.

Senior Miriam Ayora helped carry the women's golf team through the 2022-23 season. She received SEC Golfer of the Week on March 22 and helped raise the hogs to first place in the SEC championship. Miriam shot a 3-over 75 par in the first round of the tournament and had the third-best par 5s average at 4.50. Both helped her land 36th place in the first round. She then finished off the tournament with a 4-over 76 par and had nine pars in a row. Despite the SEC championship, Ayora's best performance was at the Mountainview Collegiate in March where she finished 11th of 90 golfers. Her final score was 209 (70-70-69) of the 864 earned team points. Her best finish, however, was at the Blessings Collegiate where she placed 7th helping Arkansas place 3rd overall out of 11 teams. Miriam's successful season boosted the hogs and helped them qualify for their 20th straight NCAA Regional. The team finished in sixth place with 880 points and was one stroke away from advancing to the NCAA Nationals.

DEFEATING LSU

Barnhill Arena was packed with fans who came to support the Razorbacks gymnastics team as they took on the LSU Tigers. Each section wore red or white shirts to "Stripe the Barn," and gymnasts like sophomore Leah Smith were thrilled to see the turnout. My favorite meet was probably LSU because Barnhill was sold out for the first time and we won," Smith said. Everybody was just feeding off each other's energy." Smith said she loves when there's a big crowd because it makes her want to perform a great routine. Ever since she was five, she's jumped on the furniture and flipped around. Now all her hard work allows her to compete as a college athlete.

Having a big crowd, it just makes it so much more fun," Smith said.

It's like a show, and I just think it's so fun that we have lots of people come out." Smith said her team couldn't perform the way they do without their coaches and support staff. I'm very thankful for the coaches, all of our support staff and everything — our team could not have gotten where we've gotten without them," Smith said. The gymnastics team dynamic was great this year, according to Smith. She said they enjoyed being around each other and wanted everyone to succeed. The gymnasts went on a retreat at the beginning of the year for the first time since the COVID-19 pandemic began. Smith said that was the first step in becoming closer.

It was like a little family this year," Smith said. From practicing almost every day to cheering at

A SUCCESSFUL SEASON

The Razorbacks ended their season in Bogle Park with a loss in the Fayetteville Regional Final. Despite the 14-4 loss against Oregon, the Hogs upheld a very successful season. The team finished with an overall record of 40-19 and won 21 of 29 games at home in Bogle Park. As a result of their season success, Arkansas was named the number four seed in the SEC tournament and the number 11 seed in the NCAA tournament. Throughout the season, many players were awarded annual, weekly, conference and national awards. Including Hannah Gambil being named to the U.S. Women Nationals Team for the Japan All-Star Series and Rylin Hedgecock and Chenise Delce being named NFCA All-Americans. Freshman, Reagan Johnson was also named All-American by DSoftball and was a Top 10 finalist for TUCCI/NFCA

National Freshman of the Year. Six Hogs were also named to NFCA All-South Region teams and six All-SEC selections were made. Next season is predicted to be no short of these expectations with outstanding transfers coming in and two newly named assistant coaches. Including former Razorback softball player Danielle Gibson Whorton.

HOGS GO INTERNATIONAL

After successful performances in the NCAA Championships, the Hogs moved forward to swim in Internationals in three countries. Three swimmers showed out during their international debuts while competing in their home countries. At the Mexico Swimming Nationals, Andrea Sansores won the 50-meter backstroke race with a time of 28.79. She also secured a win in the 50-meter butterfly with a time of 26.74, beating her personal career best. In the championship 100-meter butterfly race, Sansores swam a time of 1:00.04, again, beating her personal best and program record. Betsy Wizard competed in the British Swimming Championships. She won the C-Final 50-meter butterfly race with a 27.66. Placing second in the B-Final 200-meter butterfly, Wizard clocked a time of 2:13.07. With her record time, the swimmer beat her personal best and set a new program record. Alessia Ferraguti competed in the Italian Swimming Championship. She finished in the top 10 in the 100-meter backstroke event. Following that, Ferraguti finished 7th in the 100-meter backstroke preliminary with a time of 1:09.0, ultimately setting a new program record. In the 100-meter backstroke final, Ferraguti swam a time of 1:09.10 placing seventh in the event overall. Making themselves and the Hogs known internationally, all three Arkansas swimmers set new program and personal bests in their international swimming championships.

RAZORBACK MEN'S TENNIS

THE COMEBACK

Design and Copy by Kathryn Hammonds
Photos by Razorback Athletics

The Razorbacks men's tennis team was stuck on a losing streak after securing a winning streak of seven. Even with their losses weighing on their season, many players rose out of these odds and pushed through the season and into the SEC tournament. Arkansas lost 14 matches in a row. Their streak continued into the postseason as they wrapped up the season losing their first and last match of the SEC tournament against Vanderbilt 1-4. This loss factored into what kept them out of the NCAA championship. There is, however, hope for next season to go as planned as new recruits join the roster, including Wake Forest transfer Božo Barun.

Despite the rough season, many Razorbacks were recognized for their success. Foster Rogers and Adrien Burdet were both named to the 2023 Academic All-District Tennis Team. Jake Sweeny was then named to the SEC Community Service Team.

RAZORBACK WOMEN'S TENNIS

Gomez in the NCAA Championships

Carolina Gomez-Alonso stayed on top throughout her freshman season playing for the Razorbacks. She went 20-7 overall with a 12-5 singles dual record. Her record against ranked opponents was 3-5. This included her help with the team upset against #12 Auburn where Gomez-Alonso defeated #46 Arsenault playing for Auburn. Carolina was named SEC Freshman of the Year and two-time SEC Freshman of the Week, as well as ITA Central Region Rookie of the Year. She is the second freshman in Razorback women's tennis program history to be named SEC Freshman of the Year. Along with her other SEC titles, Gomez-Alonso was named the 2023 SEC All-Freshman Team and SEC All-SEC Second Team. She was also selected to compete in the NCAA Singles Championship. There she fell to #20 Irina Cantos of Ohio State in a three-set match, 4-6, 6-2, 2-6.

Despite the loss at the NCAA Championships, Gomez-Alonso still finished with a successful season and an outstanding record.

MEN'S TRACK AND FIELD

A SUCCESSFUL SEASON

This season, the Razorback men's track and field team was overall extremely successful. While many runners contributed to this, freshman Jaydon Hibbert has been recognized for his many achievements. Hibbert showed out at every meet during his rookie season competing in triple jump for Arkansas. He was named the 2023 Field Scholar Athlete of the Year for his outstanding academics and was the third Razorback in history to be a finalist for The Bowerman Award. To show for his success on the field, Hibbert was awarded USTFCCCA Co-National Field Athlete of the Year and SEC Outdoor Field Athlete of the Year. After winning the SEC Outdoor triple jump conference title with a mark of 58-7.5 (17.87), he was also awarded USTFCCCA National Athlete of the Week. With that jump alone, Hibbert broke world records. The Razorbacks broke records and pulled together to win their 21st NCAA Indoor National Title. With this success at the national level, Jaydon Hibbert was awarded SEC Indoor Freshman Field Athlete. Jaydon also competed in many meets outside of the season including the Diamond League triple jump where he placed second and the Jamaican Championships where he took home a victory for Arkansas.

Consecutive Indoor Champions

Both Men's and Women's Razorbacks Track and Field teams brought home national titles from the Indoor National Championships. The men had a combined score of 63 points to bring home their 21st NCAA indoor championship title. This win marked the 42nd overall championship for the program. The women's team not only brought back a national title, but broke the world record in the 4 x 400 relay. This task was accomplished with a time of 3:21:75, beating the world record set by Russia of 3:23:27 in 2006. With their overall points combined with the relay win, the women's team collected 64 total points. Both programs did not stop at claiming their national titles. Many individual records were set and beaten by the Razorbacks. All eyes were on Jaydon Hibbert and Britton Wilson. Hibbert beat the national collegiate record on his first attempt in the triple jump. His distance traveled was 57-6.5 (17.54). He beat three records Jamaica's national record, the World U20 record set in 2017 and the Arkansas school record set in 1985. Britton Wilson claimed the title for the 400m race with a 49.48. She beat the American and collegiate record of 50.15, which was ranked second on the all-time world list.

VOLLEYBALL

THE SENIOR STAR: MAGGIE CARTWRIGHT

Senior Maggie Cartwright started 18 matches, played in all but one set, and led the team in hitting percentage during the 2022 season. As she nears the end of her collegiate volleyball career, she said she's not only grown as an athlete, but also as a person. Our program has done a great job to set us up for success," Cartwright said. I've just grown overall as a person, and I feel as if I can accomplish a lot more than I did my freshman year." Cartwright said the coaches were a big part of her decision to come to Arkansas in the first place. After hitting the weight room and attending countless private lessons during high school, she decided to trust she'd end up in the right place for college — and she did. She said the coaches do a great job of supporting the team through the tough parts of volleyball and college in general. Every year, the volleyball team goes to a cabin for team-building time, which Cartwright said is special because it helps them bond outside of volleyball. She said each team has been different throughout her years in college, but they always work well together.

Personality-wise, we're all so different, and you get new people that are so different," Cartwright said. Every year we all somehow work together — I think we're good friends out of volleyball too." Cartwright said the highlight of her 2022 season was when they beat Washington. I think that was our turning point when we realized we can do this, we can compete with these big teams," Cartwright said. I think that really set the tone for the season." The Razorbacks advanced to the second round of the NCAA tournament for the first time since 2005, but fell 3-1 to Oregon at the end of the season.

TAKE CLASS OUTSIDE

Copy by Riley Atkinson

Her classes looked different from other pre-nursing freshmen. Instead of studying biological organisms or nomenclature, Jacklyn Beres took a backpacking trip with her class to learn about outdoor living skills. Beres came to the university with too many credits from dual credit classes in high school, so she needed to fill hours. Her boss at University Recreation suggested the outdoor leadership minor, which fit her passion perfectly.

It doesn't feel like your typical classroom experience," Beres said. "I'm learning skills that I will be able to apply to my life and to what I enjoy doing for recreation, so I see it in a different way than Biology or Chemistry that are hard to directly apply to your life."

The outdoor appeal of Arkansas drove Beres to apply for school at the university because she loves rock climbing and experiencing nature.

Going to Arkansas was absolutely incredible," Beres said. "Every single weekend I was doing something, whether it was backpacking or it was climbing, and I really loved that." She said her classes have taught her to facilitate positive outdoor experiences and safely participate in outdoor activities. One of her classes, an 8-week outdoor living skills class, took a weekend backpacking trip to apply what they learned in class.

Each classmate taught an applicable lesson on the trip. Beres showed how to properly dispose of waste while adhering to backpacking regulations.

Throughout the day people had different topics that they would teach on as those skills became necessary," Beres said. "Not only was it good to learn from classmates, but it was also good because teaching is a good way to learn the information."

Although Beres probably won't pursue a career in the outdoor industry, she said the skills she's learning will be applicable in any future job.

You have to be creative and be able to think fast and think of new ways to do things, and it also requires a lot of mental toughness, which is applicable to any career," Beres said. "Outdoor experience is a part of her life that she wants to remain constant no matter what she does after college."

I don't think that after college I will have a career in the outdoor industry, but it's been a huge part of my life for a very long time and it's something that I want to remain constant," Beres said. "A career is important and it's a big part of my life, but what I do outside my career is also really important to me."

A WORLD AWAY

Copy by S. E. Silliman

Sponsored by his relatives, Rafael Rasse moved from Venezuela to the United States three years ago to pursue an education at the university as an international student.

"I ended up at the University of Arkansas because of all the good programs they have," Rasse said. For me, it was the best opportunity."

Currently in his junior year, Rasse plans to get a bachelor's degree in computer science with a minor in mathematics. He is a very hardworking and efficient student — he has established goals he wants to achieve.

He's described his international experience as a generally positive one. Rasse discussed the environment for international students as friendly and helpful. He said that the Multicultural Center serves as a great support system for international students academically and socially. Rasse did note that the university does not provide translators for classes. While this might be challenging for some, he personally considers it an important part of adapting to a foreign environment. While he has adapted to the change in environment, he acknowledged that this is not true of all international students.

"I feel like it's important for people who are in classes with international students to understand that sometimes it's a little hard for us to understand concepts," Rasse said.

Just keep in mind that sometimes we try a little harder and give us that grace."

Rasse's experience is not without hardship. Most of his family lives in a different continent, so he's unable to see them regularly. He is very grateful to live in the age of technology and said he talks on FaceTime with his family every single day.

"I do miss my family," Rasse said.

"I cannot imagine being here even thirty years ago when we didn't have that [FaceTime]."

Outside of his academics, Rasse enjoys spending time with his friends, watching movies, going on hikes, playing pickleball and tennis as well as appreciating the snow of Arkansas. He shared that he lived on the beach in Venezuela and that he misses it so much that he tries to go to the beach every year.

THE PRESIDENT

Copy by Riley Atkinson

Whether students want to get class canceled or deal with a professor who strays from the syllabus, Lauren Loften encourages them to reach out to student government.

As student body president this year, Loften said she can do more than many people think — she's helped with everything from unfair parking tickets to school cancellations for snow days.

"I just wish people knew that they do have a voice, they can express it, and they should express it," Loften said. "Any things they don't like about the University of Arkansas are subject to change. We have really good leaders on campus, not just student leaders, but real leaders who are willing to take that feedback and take it to heart to make changes."

Loften has loved her experience as president because she gets to help students, but she's also made a lasting impact on campus events and built friendships with the rest of her staff.

Student government successfully organized the largest blood drive in 10 years at the University of Arkansas. As a public health major, Loften thinks events like this make her job worth it because they were able to encourage first-time donors and impact lives.

Loften said she loves watching her team do work they're passionate about like when Vice President Tyler Merreighn put on an MLK Jr. vigil that brought the community together.

"It feels like every month something happens, and I'm really thankful to get to lead and be a part of and get to support what everyone else is doing," Loften said.

Loften said her time as president has grown her in just about every single way that a person could be grown. "She learned that representing 28,000 undergraduate students sometimes means having hard conversations with administrators, but she will always be grateful for this experience."

"I've really enjoyed my time," Loften said. "It's been really impactful and I've gotten to meet a lot of great people. It's an organization that has the capacity to do a lot and make a lot of great changes."

Another year, another book. Just another drop in the bucket of my collegiate career. Drops keep coming and all of a sudden your bucket is full - full of excitement and stress and love and heartbreak and everything else that makes up a collegiate career. I can feel all the drops slipping through my fingers - late nights on Dickson, study groups and the hundreds of people I met along the way. At the end of the line, I hope your bucket is full of hope and excitement for life after college, but you also caught some drops of life-lessons and perseverance along the way. And more than that, I hope you don't forget those who poured into your bucket along the way. The biggest thanks to Chloe Miller and Hannah Cunningham for always sticking by me and keeping my feet on the ground. Thank you to Cheri Freeland for not only the advice but all of the laughs. And thank you to each of you who pick up and cherish my books. I always knew the Razorback wasn't done yet, and neither are we.

Dickson shuts down at 3 - right in time for a few hours of sleep before morning classes
After sneaking back into the dorm without waking the roommate
And after a late night snack at Plomo's or Waffle House.
Then finally after a day of class, an evening of homework and a night of memories, how can someone find the warm comfort of sleep?

We met at Old Main and lived as hard as we could.
Much to the dismay of our underage lovers, we went from frat house to frat house to dance to songs we were screaming at the top of our lungs.
It's long after midnight as we walk past Old Main Stopping to bend over and laugh at the night we won't soon forget.

The morning sun is breaking over Old Main.
It's another full day on campus just like the others before
But Old Main gleams like it's holding a special secret just for me
Some piece of wisdom from watching all of the 20-somethings before learning how they want to live their lives.

Pack up your stuff and go drop off your bag
I'll meet you back at Old Main then we'll head down
To BAR to blow off some steam.
But tomorrow there will be so much more
After a day of classes, assignments and that one professor who never makes any sense.

And his long rants don't compare to the long days as the spring semester comes to an end.
The year felt like it would never end
but this is our last night.
Our days passed us by, but Old
Main sits and waits,
Holding our days and our nights and our lifetimes.
